Course description:

Historically, Ethnic Studies classes have paid the most attention to relationships between groups of color and whites. While such an approach is certainly understandable and useful, given the significance of the relationship between Indians and whites or blacks and whites, for example, recent scholarship investigating relationships among communities of color has revealed a similarly rich set of knowledge about how race works in the US. This seminar explores one of those contact zones, providing important perspectives on racialization and racial formation, the constant presence of whiteness in shaping race relations, the role of each group in shaping the identity and history of the other and of the United States, slavery and freedom, subjugation and sovereignty, cultural appropriation and transgression, identity and power, alliance and antipathy.

Required texts:

- Other readings on blackboard.

Grading:
Analysis/response papers (3 papers, 4 –5 pages each): 60%
Take home final: 20%
Participation/attendance: 20%
Late policy: Assignments will receive a one-grade deduction for being late, and another grade deduction every week thereafter.

Academic honesty is required at all points in your education. Acts of academic dishonesty will result in an F for the class and referral to the office of student conduct. Be particularly careful to avoid plagiarism by properly acknowledging all sources of information, including quotations, paraphrases, and ideas that are not your own. If you are unsure about what needs to be cited, err on the side of caution and/or speak to me about it. See http://www.libweb.uoregon.edu/guides/plagiarism/students/ for details.

For those of you with disabilities, please let me know what accommodations I can make that will help make this class equally accessible for you.

Participation/attendance:
This is a predominantly discussion-based class (as opposed to lecture-based). Participation in class discussions, therefore, is required. You will need to come prepared to discuss the assigned readings every single day. There will be large and small group discussions, and I will call on students to speak many, many times, whether your hand is raised or not! Attendance is part of participation—more than two absences will affect your grade negatively, up to and including failing the class.

Analysis and Response Papers:
Each of these short papers provides you with further opportunity to reflect on the readings and discussions for the course. You are essentially discussing the readings with me in these papers: tell me what you liked, what amazed you, what you disagree with or agree with, what is important, how it applies elsewhere, how the readings compare with one another, what you wish they would have said or left out, what you would explore more, etc. This is the scholarly act of engaging with and critiquing other people's ideas and building on them, telling me what you think of them. I don't want summaries/book reports, nor do I want you to reiterate class discussions (though building on class discussions is fine), nor do I want you to use sources from outside of class. Just give me your original thoughts, grounded in examples from the readings. Each paper should discuss the readings as a set in some depth, and the best papers will synthesize themes from all the readings for a given paper. It is not necessary to have an overarching argument for the papers—you can simply engage each reading or set of readings on its own terms and then move on to the next. Your writing style should be somewhere between formal paper and a diary entry—it is fine to use first person singular, but don't be sloppy.
